Summit Hill Wealth Management may group certain related Client accounts for the purposes of achieving the minimum account size and determining the annualized fee.

For example, a Client with $2,500,000 under management would pay $5,562.50 on a quarterly basis.

AUM	Quarterly fee	Total
First $1,000,000	x 0.275% =	$2,750
Next $1,500,000	x 0.1875% =	$2,812.50
Grand total for the quarter		$5,562.50

Fees are negotiable. Fees may differ based on a number of factors:

- Size of the relationship
- Level and complexity of services needed – Accounts receiving more services may have higher fees.
- Trading activity and active portfolio management – actively managed accounts generally have higher fees than fixed income accounts, buy and hold portfolios, and mutual fund or exchange traded fund accounts.

Fees are billed quarterly in advance based on the amount of assets managed as of the close of business on the last business day of the previous quarter. Lower fees for comparable services may be available from other sources. Clients may terminate their account within five (5) business days of signing the Investment Advisory Agreement with no obligation and without penalty. After five (5) business days, the Client may cancel by providing written notice to Summit Hill Wealth Management and Summit Hill Wealth Management may terminate advisory services with thirty (30) days written notice to the Client. For accounts opened or closed mid-billing period, fees will be prorated based on the days services are provided during the given period. All unearned fees will be refunded to the Client. Client shall be given thirty (30) days prior written notice of any increase in fees. Any increase in fees will be acknowledged in writing by both parties before any increase in said fees occurs.

For purposes of determining value, securities and other instruments traded on a market for which actual transaction prices are publicly reported are valued at the last reported sale price on the principal market in which they are traded.

Compensation for our services will be calculated in accordance with what is set in the client agreement. We may modify the terms of any agreement by written changes submitted to the client for signature. Changes will not be effective until Summit Hill Wealth Management has received the signed agreement from the client. While we strive to maintain competitive fees, the same or similar services may be available from other firms at higher or lower fees.

If Summit Hill Wealth Management is authorized or permitted to deduct fees directly from the account by the custodian:

- Summit Hill Wealth Management will provide the Client with an invoice concurrent to instructing the custodian to deduct the fee stating the amount of the fee, the formula used to calculate the fee, the amount of assets under management the fee is based on and the time period covered by the fee;
- Summit Hill Wealth Management will obtain written authorization signed by the Client allowing the fees to be deducted; and
- The Client will receive monthly statements directly from the custodian which disclose the fees deducted.

Summit Hill Wealth Management may also utilize the services of a Sub-Advisor to manage Clients' investment portfolios. Summit Hill Wealth Management will enter into Sub-Advisor agreements with other registered investment advisor firms. When using Sub-Advisors, the Client will pay additional fees. The Sub-Advisors fees are exclusive of the fees charged by Summit Hill Wealth Management.

If there is insufficient cash in your account to pay your fees, securities in your portfolio may be sold to pay our fee. In addition to our fees, there may be custodial, mutual fund, 12b-1 fees or similar third-party management fees and charges.

You are responsible for the payment of all third-party fees (i.e. custodian fees, mutual fund fees, 12b-1 fees, transaction fees & commissions, etc.). Those fees are also separate and distinct from the fees we charge. Summit Hill Wealth Management does the best we can to minimize all fees and transaction costs.

All brokerage commissions, stock transfer fees, 12b-1 fees and other similar charges incurred in connection with transactions for the account will be paid out of the assets in the account and are in addition to the investment management fees paid to us. While we take measures to ensure the fees charged are accurate, it is your responsibility to ensure the amount of fee charged is correct. In addition to invoices and reports sent by us, you will receive statements directly from these custodians or mutual funds or other investments you hold. We strongly urge you to compare our invoices and reports to custodian statements for accuracy.

The investment advisory contract may be terminated by the client within five (5) days of signing the contract without incurring any advisory fees or penalty. Ongoing, Summit Hill Wealth Management or our clients can terminate our agreement upon receipt of written notice to the other party.

When an agreement is terminated, we will refund any pre-paid, unearned fees based on the number of days remaining in the quarter after termination. Refunds will be made within 30 days of the effective date of termination. If billing in arrears, Summit Hill Wealth Management will invoice for all earned fees as of the date of termination.

You will be responsible for paying all fees including full quarterly custodial administrative fees, account closure fees, mutual fund fees and all trading costs due to the termination. The custodian may assess additional fees for transfer of illiquid investments. If there is insufficient cash in the account, the liquidation of some securities may be used to pay the fees. Prior to termination of an agreement, we can provide a good-faith estimate of these fees.

Summit Hill Wealth Management does not accept commission for the sale of securities or other investment products, including asset-based sales charges or service fees from the sale of mutual funds.

If the services to be provided start any time other than the first day of a quarter or month, the fee will be prorated based on the number of days remaining in the quarter or month. If this Agreement is terminated prior to the end of the billing cycle, Summit Hill Wealth Management shall be entitled to a prorated fee based on the number of days during the fee period services were provided or Client will be due a prorated refund of fees for days services were not provided in the billing cycle.

The fee schedule, which includes compensation of Summit Hill Wealth Management for the services is described in Summit Hill Wealth Management's methods of analysis include Charting analysis, Cyclical analysis, Fundamental analysis, Modern portfolio theory, Quantitative analysis and Technical analysis.

Cyclical analysis involves the analysis of business cycles to find favorable conditions for buying and/or selling a security.

Fundamental analysis involves the analysis of financial statements, the general financial health of companies, and/or the analysis of management or competitive advantages.

Modern portfolio theory is a theory of investment that attempts to maximize portfolio expected return for a given amount of portfolio risk, or equivalently minimize risk for a given level of expected return, each by carefully choosing the proportions of various asset.

Quantitative analysis deals with measurable factors as distinguished from qualitative considerations such as the character of management or the state of employee morale, such as the value of assets, the cost of capital, historical projections of sales, and so on.

Technical analysis involves the analysis of past market data; primarily price and volume.

Summit Hill Wealth Management uses long term trading.

Long term trading is designed to capture market rates of both return and risk. Due to its nature, the long-term investment strategy can expose clients to various types of risk that will typically surface at various intervals during the time the client owns the investments. These risks include but are not limited to inflation (purchasing power) risk, interest rate risk, economic risk, market risk, and political/regulatory risk.

Our methodology is to put in place a portfolio approach that is in fact diversified, has a reasonable cost to own, and offers performance that is competitive given the holdings in the portfolio.

We may utilize alternative investment strategies that provide alternatives to traditional equity and bond investments and the opportunity to obtain attractive risk-adjusted returns with lower correlations to traditional strategies. They may benefit portfolios by increasing the risk-adjusted returns and providing downside protection during market declines. We prefer liquid alternative investment strategies that provide access to non-traditional strategies and assets with daily liquidity. We define liquid alternatives as investments that exhibit modest to low correlation with traditional stock and bond investments and are accessible in broadly available investment vehicles that are without the principal lock-ups of traditional private equity funds and hedge funds.

All investments include a risk of loss that clients should be prepared to bear. Performance of any investment is not guaranteed. We use our best efforts and expertise to manage your assets. However, we cannot guarantee any level of performance or that you will not experience financial loss.

Cyclical analysis assumes that the markets react in cyclical patterns which, once identified, can be leveraged to provide performance. The risks with this strategy are two- fold: 1) the markets do not always repeat cyclical patterns; and 2) if too many investors begin to implement this strategy, then it changes the very cycles these investors are trying to exploit.

Fundamental analysis concentrates on factors that determine a company's value and expected future earnings. This strategy would normally encourage equity purchases in stocks that are undervalued or priced below their perceived value. The risk assumed is that the market will fail to reach expectations of perceived value.

Modern portfolio theory assumes that investors are risk averse, meaning that given two portfolios that offer the same expected return, investors will prefer the less risky one. There are different combinations of risk-assets with a set of optimal portfolios along an efficient frontier of risk and return. These optimal portfolios offer different combinations of risk and return with investors selecting the combination that best matches their own desired returns and risk preferences. The implication is that a rational investor will not invest in a portfolio if a second portfolio exists with a more favorable risk-expected return profile – i.e., if for that level of risk an alternative portfolio exists which has better expected returns.

Quantitative analysis Investment strategies using quantitative models may perform differently than expected as a result of, among other things, the factors used in the models, the weight placed on each factor, changes from the factors' historical trends, and technical issues in the construction and implementation of the models.

Clients should be aware that there is a material risk of loss using any investment strategy. The investment types listed below (leaving aside Treasury Inflation Protected/Inflation Linked Bonds) are not guaranteed or insured by the FDIC or any other government agency.

Equity investments generally refers to buying shares of stocks in return for receiving a future payment of dividends and/or capital gains if the value of the stock increases. The value of equity securities may fluctuate in response to specific situations for each company, industry conditions and the general economic environments.

Fixed income investments generally pay a return on a fixed schedule, though the amount of the payments can vary. This type of investment can include corporate and government debt securities, leveraged loans, high yield, and investment grade debt and structured products, such as mortgage and other asset-backed securities, although individual bonds may be the best-known type of fixed income security. In general, the fixed income market is volatile and fixed income securities carry interest rate risk. (As interest rates rise, bond prices usually fall, and vice versa. This effect is usually more pronounced for longer-term securities.) Fixed income securities also carry inflation risk, liquidity risk, call risk, and credit and default risks for both issuers and counterparties. The risk of default on treasury inflation protected/inflation linked bonds is dependent upon the U.S. Treasury defaulting (extremely unlikely); however, they carry a potential risk of losing share price value, albeit rather minimal.

Mutual Funds: Investing in mutual funds carries the risk of capital loss and thus you may lose money investing in mutual funds. All mutual funds have costs that lower investment returns. The funds can be of bond “fixed income” nature (lower risk) or stock “equity” nature.

Exchange Traded Funds (ETFs): An ETF is an investment fund traded on stock exchanges, similar to stocks. Investing in ETFs carries the risk of capital loss (sometimes up to a 100% loss in the case of a stock holding bankruptcy). Areas of concern include the lack of transparency in products and increasing complexity, conflicts of interest and the possibility of inadequate regulatory compliance. Precious Metal ETFs (e.g., Gold, Silver, or Palladium Bullion backed “electronic shares” not physical metal) specifically may be negatively impacted by several unique factors, among them (1) large sales by the official sector which own a significant portion of aggregate world holdings in gold and other precious metals, (2) a significant increase in hedging activities by producers of gold or other precious metals, (3) a significant change in the attitude of speculators and investors.

Exchange Traded Notes (ETNs): ETNs are senior unsecured debt obligations of an issuer, typically a bank or another financial institution; however, ETNs are not categorized as typical fixed income products. Unlike traditional bonds, ETNs typically do not pay any interest payments to investors. Instead, the issuer promises to pay the holder of the ETN an amount determined by the performance of the underlying index or benchmark on the ETN’s maturity date (typically 10, 30 or in some cases even 40 years from issuance), minus any specified fees. In addition, unlike traditional bonds, ETNs trade on exchanges throughout the day at prices determined by the market, similar to stocks or ETFs. But unlike ETFs, ETNs do not buy or hold assets to replicate or approximate the performance of the underlying index. Although investors may come across materials that refer to ETNs as shares, they are in fact unsecured debt obligations. Some ETNs provide exposure to familiar, broad-based indices, while others do so to less familiar asset classes or newer, more complex, or even proprietary indexes. For example, there are ETNs linked to indexes that track emerging markets, commodities such as gold and oil, foreign currencies and market volatility. Some of the indexes and investment strategies used by ETNs can be quite sophisticated and may not have much performance history. The return on an ETN generally depends on price changes if the ETN is sold prior to maturity (as with stocks or ETFs)—or on the payment, if any, if the ETN is held to maturity or redeemed (as with some other structured products). There are a number of risks associated with ETNs including: Credit Risk; Market Risk; Liquidity Risk; Price-Tracking Risk; Holding-Period Risk; Call, Early Redemption and Acceleration Risk; and Conflicts of Interest.

Master Limited Partnerships (MLP): Generally, Master Limited Partnerships (MLPs) are exchange-traded investments that are focused on exploration, development, mining, processing, or transportation of minerals or natural resources. MLPs hold cash-generating assets such as oil and gas properties or pipelines. MLPs have certain characteristics that can make them attractive to some investors, including partnership tax consequences, limited liability to investors for the MLP’s debts, and anticipated consistent distributions of cash.

Structured Notes Risk: The risks involved with using structured notes are credit risk of the issuing investment bank, illiquidity, and there is a risk to the pricing accuracy as most structured notes do not trade after issuance.

However, like all investments, MLPs have risks investors should consider before making an investment decision. Those risks include governance features that can favor management over other investors, potential conflicts of interest, and concentrated exposure to a single industry or commodity. Since most MLPs are clustered in the energy sector, they can therefore be sensitive to shifts in oil and gas prices.

Managed Futures: Historically, managed futures strategies have had low correlation to stocks and bonds, which may help diversify a traditional portfolio. Investments linked to commodity or currency futures contracts can be highly volatile compared to investments in traditional securities. Funds holding instruments linked to commodity or currency futures contracts may experience large losses. The value of instruments linked to commodity or currency futures contracts may be affected by changes in overall market movements, commodity or currency benchmarks, volatility, changes in interest rates, or factors affecting a particular industry, commodity or currency.

The value of Commodity Futures Contracts typically is based upon the price movements of a physical commodity and the market's expectations for such moves in the future. The prices of Commodity Futures Contracts may fluctuate quickly and dramatically and may not correlate to price movements in other asset classes.

Hedged Mutual Funds: This newer breed of mutual fund purports to deliver hedge fund-like exposure but is available in a mutual fund structure. They are mutual funds that employ investment tactics traditionally only found in hedge funds including the use of leverage, derivatives, and short selling. This is unlike traditional, 'long-only' mutual funds which limit themselves to buying and holding assets, most typically public equities or bonds. The new tactics employed within hedged mutual funds allow mutual fund investors to gain access to a wide range of traditionally exclusive hedge fund strategies including merger arbitrage, convertible arbitrage, long/short equity, and macro trading.

The use of derivatives, forward and futures contracts, and commodities exposes the funds to additional risks including increased volatility, lack of liquidity, and possible losses greater than the fund's initial investment as well as increased transaction costs. Concentration generally will lead to greater price volatility. A fund enters into a short sale by selling a security it has borrowed. If the market price of a security increases after the fund borrows the security, the fund will suffer a potentially unlimited loss when it replaces the borrowed security at the higher price. Short sales also involve transaction and other costs that will reduce potential fund gains and increase potential fund losses. Diversification does not eliminate risk. An investor considering hedged mutual funds should be able to tolerate potentially wide price fluctuations. The funds are subject to high portfolio turnover risk as a result of frequent trading, and thus, will incur a higher level of brokerage fees and commissions, and cause a higher level of tax liability to shareholders in the funds. Funds may attempt to increase its income or total return through the use of securities lending, and they may be subject to the possibility of additional loss as a result of this investment technique.

Exchange Traded Real Estate Investment Trusts (REITs): A REIT is a corporation, trust or association that owns and manages a portfolio of real estate properties and/or mortgages, allowing shareholders to invest in larger-scale, income producing real estate through a traditional method: The stock market. REITs combine the potential of real estate's increasing value over time with the benefits of transparency and liquidity associated with publicly traded stock.

REITs are traded on the stock market, and they involve the risk that would typically be expected of an equity investment. They are also adversely affected by weakness in real estate prices.

Interest rates. Rising rates can be a double-edged sword when it comes to investing in REITs. If higher rates are driven by growth in the underlying economy, inflation is passed through in the form of higher rents which is growth in income to the investor. REITs also have the potential to produce negative total returns during the times when interest rates are elevated or rising without economic growth.

Use of Sub-Advisors. Summit Hill Wealth Management may select certain sub-advisors to manage a portion of its clients' assets. In these situations, Summit Hill Wealth Management continues to conduct ongoing due diligence of such sub-advisors, but such recommendations generally rely on the sub-advisor's ability to successfully implement their investment strategies. In addition, Summit Hill Wealth Management generally may not have the ability to supervise the sub-advisors on a day-to-day basis.

There are risks associated with utilizing Sub-Advisors. This includes Manager Risk where the Sub-Advisor fails to execute the stated investment strategy and Business Risk where the Sub-Advisor has financial or regulatory problems. The specific risks associated with the portfolios of the Sub-Advisor's which is disclosed in the Sub-Advisor's Form ADV Part 2.

CFA[®] Chartered Financial Analyst

The Chartered Financial Analyst (CFA) charter is a globally respected, graduate-level investment credential established in 1962 and awarded by CFA Institute — the largest global association of investment professionals.

To earn the CFA charter, candidates must: 1) pass three sequential, six-hour examinations; 2) have at least four years of qualified professional investment experience; 3) join CFA Institute as members; and 4) commit to abide by, and annually reaffirm, their adherence to the CFA Institute Code of Ethics and Standards of Professional Conduct.

The CFA Institute Code of Ethics and Standards of Professional Conduct, enforced through an active professional conduct program, require CFA charterholders to:

- Place their clients' interests ahead of their own
- Maintain independence and objectivity
- Act with integrity
- Maintain and improve their professional competence
- Disclose conflicts of interest and legal matters

Global Recognition

Passing the three CFA exams is a difficult feat that requires extensive study (successful candidates report spending an average of 300 hours of study per level). Earning the CFA charter demonstrates mastery of many of the advanced skills needed for investment analysis and decision making in today's quickly evolving global financial industry. As a result, employers and clients are increasingly seeking CFA charterholders—often making the charter a prerequisite for employment.

Additionally, regulatory bodies in over 30 countries and territories recognize the CFA charter as a proxy for meeting certain licensing requirements, and more than 125 colleges and universities around the world have incorporated a majority of the CFA Program curriculum into their own finance courses.

Comprehensive and Current Knowledge

The CFA Program curriculum provides a comprehensive framework of knowledge for investment decision making and is firmly grounded in the knowledge and skills used every day in the investment profession. The three levels of the CFA Program test a proficiency with a wide range of fundamental and advanced investment topics, including ethical and professional standards, fixed-income and equity analysis, alternative and derivative investments, economics, financial reporting standards, portfolio management, and wealth planning.

The CFA Program curriculum is updated every year by experts from around the world to ensure that candidates learn the most relevant and practical new tools, ideas, and investment and wealth management skills to reflect the dynamic and complex nature of the profession.

CFP Board’s financial planning subject areas include insurance planning and risk management, employee benefits planning, investment planning, income tax planning, retirement planning, and estate planning;

Individuals who become certified must complete ongoing education and ethics requirements in order to maintain the right to continue to use the CFP® marks.

This requires 30 hours of continuing education hours every two years, including two hours on the Code of Ethics and other parts of the Standards of Professional Conduct, to maintain competence and keep up with developments in the financial planning field; and renewal of an agreement to be bound by the Standards of Professional Conduct. The Standards prominently require that CFP® professionals provide financial planning services at a fiduciary standard of care.
